NANCY MUELLER

ALVERA KUBAL

Our intent with this book is to inspire children to participate in a closer relationship with the angels—their invisible guardians and friends. We offer simple-to-understand, non-denominational information about the angels and archangels, compiled from a wide array of spiritual traditions. Included are several true personal accounts of angelic intercession and their interaction with children and adults.

Jacqueline Salmon of The Washington Post (6/24/08) writes, “According to a recent poll, most Americans believe that angels are active in the world, and nearly 80% think miracles occur... 92% believe in God or a higher spirit.” The mission of RoseLight Books is to provide universal and meaningful ways for parents to share spirituality with their children.

TREVOR'S THREE ANGELS

Nine-year-old Trevor woke up one night and he didn't know why—until he saw three angels! His room was bright as day, but the light was coming from them. There was a light “brighter than the sun” around them, but it didn't hurt his eyes at all. Not one, but three angels were right there in his room, and all he could do was just stare at them, his eyes wide with wonder.

They were sitting down, but he thinks they were over six feet tall. One sat on his dresser, one on his computer desk, and the third made himself comfortable on a shelf. The boy will never forget this night, so he remembers everything about them. They looked pretty much alike, with curly, blond hair that fell below their ears. Trevor noticed that two angels had blue eyes, and the third angel had green eyes. They were dressed in snowy-white robes flecked with gold, with ropes about their waists that were the color of “bright-hot bronze.” Each wore a large sword attached by a holster, and they all wore sandals on their feet. Their huge wings spread way out, white on the outside. On the inside, the feathers were colored like those of a peacock, especially beautiful.

Around the necks of the three angels were shiny, gold necklaces, and on the right hand of each one was a large, brilliant, white diamond ring. They were very merry, laughing with each other and praising God the whole time. Trevor said his bedroom “felt safe and good.” He was not the least bit afraid. For about ten minutes or so, he couldn't take his eyes off his heavenly visitors and just admired their beauty. After that, his eyes began to feel heavy, his head dropped back on his pillow and he fell asleep again. When he awoke in the morning, they were gone.

Why do you suppose nine-year-old Trevor had this wonderful visit from the angels? His father says he and his mother always pray with Trevor. They even ask for angels to protect Trevor and for him to be able to see them. His father knows, “They came because they were invited.”

Do you think if you were to invite angels to your home, they might come visit you, too?

RAPHAEL

Who is this wonderful angel dressed in a robe of green fire? It's Archangel Raphael. He is a good angel to pray to if I get sick. He will help me get better if I ask him and believe in him.

He likes to play pretty music and says I will be much happier and healthier if I do not listen to loud, blasting, pounding or creepy music. God's angels do not like that. They like sweet gentle songs and strong brave songs like classical, folk music of all countries, and some beautiful new pieces. Of course, the archangels have their own wonderful music of heaven they can share with us.

Archangel Raphael says it is very important to tell the truth because truth is like God and the more we know truth, the more we know God. Archangel Raphael helps me a lot. When I want him to be near me, I can say,

*Archangel Raphael, by healing green light,
Help me see what is true and right.
I hear God's music all around
As I'm quiet and listen to nature's sound.
I am healed by Archangel Raphael's emerald-green light of joy and truth!*

Raphael says waterfalls and wind in the trees, birds chirping and children's laughter are music to his ears, too.

Angels

When we're awake or sleeping
In the day and in the night,
Who is watching over us?
Sweet angels of Light.

They are always at our side
With loving care that never ends.
Helping, protecting, healing,
A child's very bestest friends.
